TRANSITIONAL
INTERIOR DESIGNER

Nina Farmer Interiors

At first blush, Nina Farmer's rooms look like those formal, pets-off parlors of yore. Look closer. True, she seamlessly melds regal elements of the past—1920s leather club chairs, Moroccan poufs, and the mother of all cut-crystal chandeliers—but all with a keen understanding of how we live now. (Resilient fabrics? Check. A hidden TV in the formal living room? Check.) With every project, Farmer combines a deep appreciation for Boston's historical homes with a passion for making those same spaces function on a daily basis for kids, pets, and the occasional overinebriated guest. 6 Walnut St., Boston,
